Ezekiel Rogers

ST. PETERS, ROWLEY, YORKSHIRE, ENGLAND

Built in the thirteenth century. Rev. Ezekiel Rogers preached here, 1619-1636.

Ezekiel Rogers was born at Wethersfield, Essex, England in 1590. At the age of 13 he entered Cambridge where he acquired an A.B. Degree at Bennets College in 1604 and an A.M. at Christ's in 1608. He soon became Chaplain in the family of Sir. Francis Barrington at Essex for several years. In 1619-20, he was installed at Rowley, York where he remained, as he says in his will: "about seventeen years...till for refusing to read that accursed book that allowed sports on God's holy Sabbath or Lord's day, I was suspended and by it and other signs of the times, driven with many of my hearers, into New England." (From Mr. Ezechi Rogers Plantation 1639-1850)

With a number of other Yorkshire families, he established Ezechi Rogers Plantation, now the Town of Rowley, on 4 September 1639 and was installed on 3 December 1639 as Pastor. He was minister for 22 years and died 23 January 1660 after a lingering illness in the 70th year of his age. He was interred in the Rowley graveyard. His final resting place has been marked by a variety of monuments over the years, one of which read "He was a man of eminent piety, zeal and abilities"

Although he was married three times, he left no issue. His first wife was Sarah Everard, who died after ten years. His second wife, Joan Hartopp, came to Rowley with him but died and was buried on 8 May 1649. His third wife, Mary, widow of Thomas Barker of Rowley, a woman 'in years more agreeable to him' survived him by 17 years. On the night of this marriage, his dwelling house was burned with all his goods and the books and records that he had brought from England. It was soon after this that a fall from his horse so injured his right arm that it was ever after useless. His house was rebuilt, his library replenished and he learned to use his left arm in place of his right. Throughout it all, he continued his ministerial labors.

JAMES OF ROWLEY BRANCH
First Generation

James Bailey, born^{May 31} about 1612, in England, came to Rowley in the Massachusetts Bay Colony about 1640. He married Lydia Emery. He died in Rowley August 9, 1677. She died in Rowley April 29, 1704.

James Bailey was a brother of Richard Bailey, who came to New England in 1638 in the ship "Bevis." It is not known from what part of England James and Richard came. An account of Richard and his descendants was published by Alfred Poor of Salem, Mass., in 1858, in a book entitled, "Historical and Genealogical Researches in the Merrimack Valley."

Richard Bailey in his will dated in 1648, a copy of which is printed in the Sixth Annual Report of the Bailey-Bayley Family Association, mentions his brother, James, and his nephew, John. It appears from the town records of Rowley that James Bailey acquired, by allotment and purchase, considerable real estate, and was a citizen in good standing. He held various town offices, including the office of Overseer of the Poor, and also that of Selectman for several years. His house stood on the east side of what is now called Pleasant steet in the village of Rowley, on land now owned by Mr. Charles H. Todd.

The record of the original grant is as follows: "To James Bailey one house lott containing an Acre and an halfe lying on the north side of Edward Sawyer's house lott."

The history of the Congregational church in Peacham really began with the installation of Leonard Worcester as minister. The selection of a permanent pastor was not a matter to be settled lightly, and the people of Peacham did not let themselves be hurried. They listened, with more or less approval to seventy-nine ministers before the church and town united and asked Reverend Leonard Worcester in 1799. He was born on January 1, 1767, in Hollis, New Hampshire. At the age of eighteen Leonard worked for Isaiah Thomas of Worcester, Massachusetts, to learn the printer's trade and continued to work with him for fourteen years as an apprentice. This work gave him a wide variety of knowledge. Meanwhile, he also studied theology.

In the year of 1799, the membership of the church was thirty-nine. Now, that Peacham had a minister, they should have a church with a bell tower. The church was built in 1806. Everyone was to observe the Sabbath, and support some form of religious worship. There was not be any labor of any kind on the Sabbath. The early churchgoers must have been genuinely interested in religion to have suffered the cold of the unheated church in winter. In 1815, stoves were installed. Membership increased to 370 and became the second largest Congregational Church in Vermont. A Freewill Baptist Church was organized in 1812 with James Bayley as its minister. This Church only existed eight years because of its small following. However, in 1831 a Methodist Church was formed and membership to the Congregational Church declined to 252. Evidence of the large church attendance was furnished by the extensive horse sheds which surrounded the church.

Mr. Worcester was not only an effective minister, he was also an efficient business man. The father of fourteen children, he educated five of his sons for the ministry and one as a physician on a salary that never exceeded $400.00 a year. His parishioners would keep him in supply of wood.

By 1839, Mr. Worcester, who was then 72 years old, began to fail physically and it became necessary to employ another minister to conduct the Sunday service. Father Worcester had a remarkable knowledge of the Bible and it's Scriptures. He was very strict and stern with his parishioners. But they loved him, because Father Worcester was their minister for forty years.

COURT SAYS PHONOGRAPH BELONGS TO DIVORCED WIFE

Mrs. Esther Campbell Bailey of Auburn, divorced wife of Ward Bailey, is entitled to the possession of a Columbia phonograph that is claimed by her former father-in-law, Benjamin Bailey of Fort Wayne. Justice of the Peace T. C. Ford decided Tuesday afternoon.

The hearing of the case was held in the office of the justice on the west side of the court house square. Among those testifying were Mrs. Esther Bailey, her former husband, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Campbell, and her brother, Wilbur Campbell, of Auburn, and Benjamin Bailey and his wife. The attorneys for Mrs. Bailey were Hoffman & Stump, while the attorney for the Baileys was Clarence Squires of Fort Wayne. The hearing consumed three hours.

Mrs. Esther Bailey said that on Christmas day, 1917, she and her husband were guests at a party at the Benjamin Bailey home in Auburn. Presents were distributed and her husband told her he would give her the phonograph as his gift. The couple afterward were divorced, but Mrs. Bailey kept the instrument as her personal property.

It seems that Ward Bailey had come into the possession of the phonograph in 1917 by trading off a Ford automobile that his father had owned. His father now claims that he owned the phonograph and that when Ward and his wife moved to Fort Wayne he told them they could have the machine if they lived together. Mrs. Esther Bailey testified that neither Benjamin Bailey or Ward Bailey had ever said anything of the kind to her. She later moved back to Auburn and she retained peaceable possession of the instrument until last week.

At that time, while Mrs. Esther Bailey and her parents were away from home, Benjamin Bailey came to Auburn and demanded the machine from Wilbur Campbell. The latter resisted the demand. Then a suit in replevin was started and Henry West as constable took the phonograph from the Campbell home and turned it over to Bailey. The latter gave bond pending the outcome of the action and final decision as to the ownership of the machine.

The justice decided that Benjamin Bailey did not obtain possession of the phonograph last week in a lawful way and that Mrs. Esther Bailey had been given the machine in good faith by her husband as a Christmas present.

Bailey served notice that he would appeal his suit to the circuit court. In the meantime, she retains possession years ago.

"The Old Must Die"

Benjamin Bailey was born in Essex county, New York, January 11, 1814. Here he passed the early part of his childhood, amid the grand and picturesque scenery of the Adirondack mountains, a place which is destined to produce and develop manhood in the highest degree. At the age of sixteen years he removed with his father and family to Madison county, Ohio. Here he took an active part as one of the young and heroic pioneers, for which, that and the adjacent vicinity was so famous. In 1839 he turned his attention to the land still farther westward, and thus it was that he became one of the sons of toil in our own grand state. In 1841, he married Margaret Scott, who was a young and estimable lady, residing with her parents near Wolf Lake, Noble county, Indiana. He then moved to Fort Wayne, which was then nothing more than a mere trading post. The following year he moved on the old homestead which has ever been so dear to him, and which he redeemed from the primeval forest which the country at that time mostly consisted of. During their married life 13 children were born to them; 5 boys and 8 girls, 12 of whom and the faithful wife and mother, mourn his loss. He departed this life October the 4, 1887, aged 73 years, 8 months and 22 days. Characteristics of the deceased: He was a loyal citizen in the broadest sense of the term. He never lost an opportunity in helping his fellow-men. He was a faithful husband and a loving father, and always gave every other man all the privileges he claimed for himself. Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. In the gloom of death hope sees a star, but again all hopes are baffled, and the billows roar over a Interment in Woodlawn cemetery at Auburn. Mrs. Bailly was one of the pioneers of DeKalb county, who are passing away one by one, and it will be but a few years when they will live only in the memory of their children and their grand-children.

The former mayor of Auburn, who served for 13 years, died from a complication of ailments at the Dr. Bonnell Souder hospital, where he had been taken on Tuesday. He had not been in the best of health for several years, although he continued active in business until about a month before his death. Hacker chapter, No. 63, R.A.M., DeKalb Council No. 57, R. and S. M., and a 32nd degree Mason. He was a life member of the Auburn Chamber of Commerce and held directorates in a number of local industries. He belonged to the First Methodist church and politically was a democrat.

Mr. Lige was born August 7, 1883, on a farm five miles south of Auburn and resided in Auburn and DeKalb county all of his life. On January 13, 1907 he was married to Louella Hollopeter, who resided south of Auburn, and she survives.

To this union were born four children, Warren Lige, Jr., of 802 East Seventh street, Auburn, Me., Betty Ineson of Meriden, Conn.; Mrs. Ruth Breeding of Hollywood, Fla., and Walter Lige of Deerfield, Ill. A brother, Joseph Lige of 701 North Main street, Auburn and six grandchildren also survive.

The body was taken to the Gerig funeral home and will remain there until after funeral services, to be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. H. F. Craven, pastor of the Auburn Presbyterian church, will officiate. Burial will be made in the Cedar Chapel cemetery.
